Professional Disclosure Statement for Clients Located in New Mexico

You have the right –

1. To expect that the social worker has met the minimal qualifications of education, training, and experience required by the law.
2. To examine public records maintained by the New Mexico Board of Social Work Examiners which contain the social worker's qualifications and credentials. Records concerning social workers at Deer Valley Counseling can be obtained from the Arizona Board of Behavioral Health Examiners.
3. To be given a copy of the standards of practice upon request.
4. To report a complaint about the social worker's practice to the New Mexico Board of Social Work Examiners and/or to the Arizona Board of Behavioral Health Examiners.
5. To be informed of the cost of professional services before receiving the services.
6. To privacy as allowed by law, and to be informed of the limits of confidentiality.
7. To have access to your client information by others limited. A social worker shall make reasonable efforts to limit access to client information in a social worker's agency to appropriate agency staff whose duties require access.
8. To knowledge of supervision or consultation. A social worker receiving supervision shall inform the client that the social worker may be reviewing the client's case with the social worker's supervisor or consultant. Upon request, the social worker shall provide the name of the supervisor and the supervisor's contact information.
9. To be free from being the object of discrimination while receiving social work services.
10. To have access to records as allowed by law.
